

I benefit, largely, for having XM radio. I am in the Air Force and I do an extensive amount of travel around the U.S. I always like to know what kind of wheater and traffic is ahead of me. I recently made a trip from North Dakota to Boston, then to Tennessee. The XM radio gave me constant updates that I would not of been able to get otherwise. It saved me a trip from going into some really bad weather and traffic along the way. The radio stations, which I know, make loads of money, should just take it easy on XM radio and let them go with it. It is the same thing as having this information on the internet. You can goto 100's of web sites and access weather and traffic updates. What's the difference getting it on the radio. Do you want me to plug my lap top into my car and watch the weather while driving, I don't think so. I think programming stations into my car to get these updates, on my XM radio, is a lot safer, don't you agree? Give XM radio a break, they are just trying to help out, just like everyone else. There's always someone who doesn't like what another person or business does. Thanks for reading this if you did.

A "Concerned" XM radio subscriber.